

We are gathered here today because some involved people in and around Freital are not wanting to accept any longer the rabble-rousing of so-called "concerned citizens", common racists and neo-Nazis.

Since the beginning of March there has been agitation under the slogan "Freital is resisting - No on the hotel-home/No hotel-home", stirring up hatred against people that came here looking for a better life. Some people - clearly driven by their altruism - claim that there should be help for "actual war refugees". Of course, the racist mob is the one to decide who truly needs help. On the other hand, some people are fully honest and simply do not want "any asylum seekers" in peaceful Freital. Both groups are united by their rejection of the refugee home and their hatred against its inhabitants. As usual at this kind of events, people are eager to reaffirm that they were not Nazis, but that they represented "the people" and were trying to start a discussion. But how is a discussion supposed to be open and honest, when it is started with "No on the Home"? The answer is easy, it is not open at all since such a demand presupposes the apparently hoped-for result.

Very well possible, that some believe they have to fend off existing dangers because of biased reports in the media and horror stories about "criminal asylum seekers", a "flood of asylum seekers" and the like of it. Politics on the state as well as the federal level do one last thing to the racist atmosphere through institutionalizing racism further. But against whom are people defending themselves? Against people, who left their home countries, their families, their friends. Neither because of spirit of adventure nor because of boredom. No! They have been fleeing hunger, disease, war, persecution and death. They flee the war in Syria, the famine in Somalia, anti-Roma racism in the Balkans, the dictatorship in Eritrea as well as homo- and transphobia in Serbia. They come here looking for a better life. They try to come here to earn money to support their families. Many of the refugees die on their way towards hope. They drown anonymously in the Mediterranean Sea or they die at the walls and fences defending Europe against those, whose misery many aspects of our wealth depend upon.

Those, who have made it into Europe, have to live with constant humiliation, since their stay must be made as unpleasant as possible. They are humbled by inhuman asylum politics and by people who don't want to understand that right of asylum is a human right and that everyone has the right to live in dignity.

Here in this country people agitate against so-called refugees of poverty while at the same time German emigrants are made into stars by TV shows just because... Yes, exactly, because they leave Germany to seek greener pastures. In Germany there are open warnings against an "immigration into the welfare system". However, the agitators remain short on proof. Apart from that, refugees receive less than the welfare/Hartz IV standard rate based on which they have to support themselves and their relatives. People are fanning fear of uncivilized conditions at the accommodations, fear of criminality and violence.

Here, in Freital, but not only here, those are the true danger, who stand against those who seek help. A vigilante group was formed, whose sympathies and contacts to neo-Nazi structures become evident after few clicks on facebook. The angry Kraut-salad regularly gathers in front of the refugees' home to provoke and to scare them. The inhabitants are constantly followed. Almost every step outside the hostel is documented, published and commented. Especially the comments in the social networks reveal the hatred and the eliminatory fantasies of the "promenadors". Being certainly wicked, people afterwards get excited about the refugees only walking the town in groups. The very concerned Bratwurst would call this "rioutous assemblies". In the beginning of May, one person in the home was injured by a stone thrown through the window at night. Also in the beginning of May, the accommodation was attacked with pyrotechnics. At once the group "Freital defends itself" remade this into a fake story of shootings at the asylum seeker home to stir up the inhuman atmosphere even more.

By the way: 90% of all registered crimes are committed by bio-Germans. Furhermore, we would find it completely understandable if people who have nothing steal something they cannot get through their little pocket money or their coupons.

And yes, there can be trouble among refugees, but whose fault is that? Only the refugees? No. How does it feel, to share a 12 square meter bedroom with a total stranger? Two people, strangers, of different ages and socialization. They have different religions, personal needs and political opinions. Also, behaving like an asshole is not genuinly German. Two people, who do not find a lot inside and outside their room that would make the day-to-day more berable. Who cannot understand that this can cause problems? However, the system which enables and forces such conditions is to be made responsible!

Maybe some of the promenadors are not manifest neo-Nazis. But they walk side by side with them and also do not differ from then regarding their inhuman ideas. It seems to be a German reflex to kick downwards when one is afraid to not get one's slice of the pie or even to be pushed down oneself. Especially because it seems to be so hard we thank all those who do not associate with the mob and who do not keep quiet when this mob is raging.

Don't look away when inhumanity and hatred breaks ground and the supposed political center remains silent or even joins in. Listen to your hearts and not to the inhuman rabble-rousing of NPD up to CDU, cracker-barrel, Pegida and the other racist nonsense! Everybody has the right to a decent life -- everywhere!
